Rotterdam Netherland is situated at the confluence of the Rottle with the Maas, is handsomely built, with wide, well paved streets, broad canals and high buildings face the quays on either side. Industries are various and extensive. The shipping trade and general traffic is very large. The Hague, the Capital is pleasantly situated about two miles from the sea. It is noted for the beauty of its palaces, its attractive streets, delightful walks and fine environs. St. James, its principal church, dates from 1308; it is noted for its peal of 38 bells.

George Hartle, the emigrant ancestor of the Hartle Family of Leitersburg District, was born May, 10, 1722, and may probably be identified with Hans George Hertel who arrived at Philadelphia on the 19th of September, 1749, in the ship "Patience." Captain Hugh Steel, from Rotterdam. In the confirmation certificate of George Hartle, his grandson (1819), the name is spelled "Hartel," in the records of Zion Reformed church at Hagerstown it appears as "Hertel" and "Hertle"; and in the Frederick county records, the usual orthography is "Hartley," the English phonetic equivalent of the German "Hertle."

The first George Hartle was a resident of Leitersburg District as early as 1760, when he purchased from Michael Leatherman 52 acres of land, part of the Resurvey on well taught. To this he made extensive additions by purchase and original patent, and at the time of his death he was owner of 341 acres of land, now owned by Samuel Hartle, Henry and Frederick Hartle, Alveh L. Stockslager and others.

The location of his residence cannot be definitely stated, but in all probability it was situated where the buildings on the farm of Samuel Hartle now stand. There was, however, prior to 1822 a log house on the farm of Henry and Frederick Hartle at the bank of the creek below their present residence, and the old Pioneer may have resided here.

1822-1823

In 1768 he served as constable of Upper Antietam Hundred. He died on the 13th of September, 1776, and was buried at Antietam church, near Trovengers Mill on the farm of Daniel Daub. Four sons survived him, namely, Martin, Frederick, Michael and Sebastian, among whom their father's land was divided in compliance with the terms of his will. The Survey was made by Thomas Brooke, Surveyor of Washington county, in 1781. There were also several daughters, one of whom, Eva Maria, married George Lambert. Geo. Hartle was a member of the Reformed Church.

Sebastian Hartle was the only son of George Hartle that remained in the Leitersburg District, and from him the Hartles of Washington county are descended. He resided at the farm now owned by Albert L. Stockstager; upon which he erected the present improvements. In addition to this he also owned the adjacent farm of Henry and Frederick Hartle, which he purchased from Adam Lantz in 1822, and a tract of 275 acres along the Chewsville road which he bought of Michael Grebill in 1813, besides other property and at the time of his death he was one of the wealthiest citizens of the district. He was a member of the Reformed Church, and in Politics a Democrat. He was 3 times married and died in 1840 at an advanced age, leaving the following children: Geo., John, Jacob, Mrs. Elizabeth Swope, Mrs. Sallie Swope, Mrs. Hannah Shanafelts, and Mrs. Susan Scarberry.

George Hartle was in Leitersburg District in 1788. The oldest son of Sebastian Hartle. He began farming upon the land purchased by his father from Michael Grebill and his first residence was an unfinished building formerly used as a wagon making shop which stood on the land now owned by his grandson, Clinton D. Hartle. In 1883 he purchased from Jacob Barr the farm now owned by his son, Levi Hartle, and here he lived until his death, July 8, 1856. He married Barbara Swope and their children were Elizabeth, John, Jacob, Susan who married John Marker, Mary who married Daniel Spessard, Solomon, George, Levi and Samuel.
